September 3, 2020—Self-Care and Social Justice—2 pm to 3 pm. Think self-care is a bit too precious to worry about when we have a world to change? Think again. In Self-Care and Social Justice, we’ll challenge the pop-culture notion of self-care and re-contextualize it as a fundamental need for everyone with special attention given to those who are on the frontlines of social justice, equity, and community care work. We’ll examine burnout, self-care, resilience, and the impact they have on our sense of wellbeing in order to establish a case for self-care for those who wish to better understand the social and scientific implications of self-care—especially in light of fighting for change and justice. September 8, 2020—Debunking the Myths of Supported Decision-Making and Guardianship—2 pm. People with intellectual and developmental disabilities (I/DD) have the same right to make decisions about their lives as people without disabilities. However, their ability to make their own decisions is often questioned by teachers, doctors, family members, and others. People with I/DD are at an increased risk of being placed under guardianship, and guardianship is frequently still the only option presented and utilized by families and supporters of people with I/DD. Guardianship can be an obstacle to the development of self-determination skills, and research has shown that individuals with reduced self-determination have diminished quality-of-life outcomes and are less likely to live and be integrated into their community. This webinar will describe guardianship and less restrictive decision-making alternatives, as well as help debunk some of the myths that persist about guardianship and supported decision-making. Being able to make your own decisions about your own life is one of the most important rights that people have. People with intellectual and developmental disabilities (I/DD) have the same right to make decisions about their lives as people without disabilities.
